The Session.

The Session.

Delay in the arrival of one or two members of the board prevented the opening of the session until shortly before 8 5 clock. Mr. Alexander Hamilton occupied the chair, and 5 before the meeting and progressed far every members was in his seat. There were perhaps a dozen risitors in the room, including Governor Montague, Lieutenant-Governor Willard. Attorney-General W. A. Anderson, Congressman H. F. Flood, General Charles J. Anderson, Dr. John M. Bransford, Judge Thomas Wilcox and some others.

After the minutes of the last session

Thomas Wilcox and some others.

After the minutes of the last session were head and the chairman announced that the board would conduct a public hearing, General Scott Shipp, superintendent of the Virginia Millitary Institute, explained the events leading up to the call for the meeting. He read a letter he had addressed to the purents of the cadets of the third class, asking them to aid the board in bringing the boys to reason. No meve had been made by the cadets as a result of this letter. There was no response of any sort. Governor Montague then visited the Institute, and was no response of any sort. · Willard for the Boys.

*Willard for the Boys.

After some discussion between the Governor and members of the board, Captain Willard spoke briefly. He followed the general line pursued by the Governor, but spoke more exclusively from the standpoint of the boys. The latter, he said, were laboring under the impression that an injustice had been done to them, and that their protest against the food had not been properly met. An oath, a consideration of eithes and honor, was now holding them back from signing such a paper as that prepared by General Shipp. The board, he thought, should be careful of breaking down this standard of eithes erected by the boys, whether it was a proper standard or not. As regretted their act. felt they could not violate the oath and they knew they would lose caste at the institute if they did.

Couldn't Tell Him to Do It.

"I could not look one of those boys in the face and tell him to sign that paper if he thought he could not do it with honor to himself," said Captain Willard honor to himself," said Captain Willard,

"If any mistake was made in striking out those words, it was my mistake, for they were stricken out at my suggestion and upon my responsibility."

As an alumnus of the institute Captain Willard referred to his own expertences there, and in this connection laid emphasis upon one chief point. He called attention to the failure of the board to act in the recent breaking of ranks by the entire corps. The corps left the institute and went to Lexington, and was persuaded to return by the authorities.
The board condoned the offence. Yet the mere threat of withdrawal now drew down the penalty of dismissal upon the third class.

Why Not Then?

Why Not Then?

Why Not Then?

"Why didn't you impose this penalty in the other case," added Captain Willerd. "When I was at the institute I was dismissed for the very offence you condoned in the recent case of the corps. Please understand that I am speaking from the viewpoint of the boys and have no criticisms to make. I know this board is earnestly striving to do what is best for the institute, I do not palliate the forsubordination and I think there was insubordination. But cannot the board yield a point and deal with the boys to the extent of recognizing that they are simply atandings by their standard of ethics, I know that they regret this act and I think that the request to respectantly withdraw that which was offensive is as plain an expression of regret as you can make without using the word itself.

portant, he thought, that the board should not recede from its position.

He had just received a telephone message from Lexington, saying that the third class was then in seesion, and that all but seven members had agreed to sign an expression of regret, and there was a hope of getting the entire class into line. Any recession by the board would have a bad effect. Mr. Shields said the academic dengitinent of the institute had placed Home liself on record to the effect that if the board settled the matter on any other basis than that defined at the last meeting it would prejudice discipline and basis than that defined at the last meeting it would prejudice discipline and would have a disastrous effect on the corps and particularly on the third class.

Dr. Upshur, Mr. Brown, Mr. Shelton and several others spoke. Captain Smith said he considered the question one of construction of words and not of discipline. He thought the boys had compiled with the demand of the authorities.

Attitude of Board.

Attitude of Board.

The attitude of the board was set forth at length by Mr. Hamilton, who spoke with great feeling. The chairman declared that if the insubordination of the cadets went unpunished in the absence of any expression of regret it would strike at the very foundation of the institute. The expression of regret had been specifically stricken from the paper, which he considered inadequate, since it indicated the continuance of a defiant and insubordinate spirit.

He thought it likely that the food complaint was simply a cloak for insubordination. If the cadets were to be permitted under the guise of a folish oath to submit the principles of discipline on Attitude of Board.

department of the Institute had placed mitted under the guise of a folish cath to submit the principles of discipline on which the school were based, the board might as well close the Institute at once. "It may, perhaps, be time for me to resign and give place to some younger man," said Mr. Hamilton, "but while I am on this board I must perform my duty. It is the most unpleasant duty of my life, but it must be done. I regard this as the cycled point in the history this as the crucial point in the history of the Institute."

Mr. Hamilton strongly urged that the board stand firm in its position, but give the boys time for further consideration. He spoke earnestly, and his words carried great weight. Shortly after he sat down the vote on the resolutions was taken, resulting as already indicated.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Unable to retain nourishment owing to long periods of fasting, John Kleinst, the "back-to-nature" preacher, died yesterday. Kleinst, who was 50 years old, had traveled all over the country on foot, wearing only sandals and clad in the thianest and coarsest garments. When he did not fast he lived on roots and herbs.

One of his beliefs was that the day of Judgment was at hand and frequently he would stop persons on the street and with uplifted fingers warn them to prepare for the last day. He were no underclothing, and for a few months he was a familiar figure in the down-town streets, in which he soid pamphlets advocating his ideas of getting back to nature.

He was committed to the Dunning insane asylum three months ago. A friend in Peoria, Ill., It is said, procured his release and took him to that city. He walked it Chicago, and arrived here two weeks ago in an emaclated condition from fasting.

BASEBALL LEAGUES

Proposition Before Session in Chicago to Unite American and National League.

(By Associated Press.) CHICAGO, November 22.—The American Base-Ball League met in annual ses-Routine business occupied the time. What business is to come up for consideration to-morrow is problematical, as all the members of the league refused to discuss the affairs of the organization. It is said, however, that the proposed amalgamation of the American and the amalgamation of the American and the National Leagues will come up for discussion. The tentative plan of proposed amalgamation, it is said, is for a combination of the two present major leagues into a major and a minor league. In Boston, Philadelphia and St. Louis teams of the American and the National Leagues are to be consolidated, and in other cities where the two leagues no conflict the present National League clubs are to be taken into the new National League, while the American clubs are to be taken into the new National League, while the American League clubs in these cities are to be thrown back into the minor league, which is to retain the name of American League, but which is to belong to class of the minor leagues. If this plan should be carried out, it would leave Comiskey, of the Chicago Club, and Farrell, of the New York American League Club, out of the consolidation scheme. According to the proposed amalgamation plan, it is said, the new National League would be made up of the best eight cities in the said, the new National League would be made up of the best eight cities in the country, with Ban Johnson as president of the new organization. Nearly all the members of the league attended to-day's meeting. The board of directors first held a meeting in President Johnson's office, and went through the formality of awarding the pennant to Philadelphia. It was decided that postponed games on any trip must be played on the next trip.

C. W. Somers, of Cleveland, was elected vice-president of the league, and Chicago, Washington, New York and Cleveland were chosen to represent the league on the rules committee, which will mest a similar committee of the National League some time before the opening of the playing season next year, and remedy any defects in the present rules.
